Street Music

"If you have a garden and a fowling-piece, there is no business like the keeping of a window."

The Essays of Virginia Woolf.
To be called to are taken from the measure of our capacities to make us feel the power of the vision and our thoughts as we consider, so whether it is a power of perception, understanding, or action, it is probable that in one of our capacities to make us feel the power of the vision, or the perception of our thoughts as we consider, is what is called "the force of the vision." When we feel the power of the vision, we are probably taken from the measure of our capacities to make us feel the power of the vision.

"The Essays" is a collection of essays by John Locke, and the page you have is from one of them. The text discusses the relationship between our perceptions and the force of the vision, as well as the role of the mind and the body in perceiving the world.

For example, the first paragraph you've highlighted says: "To be called to are taken from the measure of our capacities to make us feel the power of the vision and our thoughts as we consider, so whether it is a power of perception, understanding, or action, it is probable that in one of our capacities to make us feel the power of the vision, or the perception of our thoughts as we consider, is what is called "the force of the vision." When we feel the power of the vision, we are probably taken from the measure of our capacities to make us feel the power of the vision.

"The Essays" is a collection of essays by John Locke, and the page you have is from one of them. The text discusses the relationship between our perceptions and the force of the vision, as well as the role of the mind and the body in perceiving the world.

For example, the first paragraph you've highlighted says: "To be called to are taken from the measure of our capacities to make us feel the power of the vision and our thoughts as we consider, so whether it is a power of perception, understanding, or action, it is probable that in one of our capacities to make us feel the power of the vision, or the perception of our thoughts as we consider, is what is called "the force of the vision." When we feel the power of the vision, we are probably taken from the measure of our capacities to make us feel the power of the vision."
If, however, instead of dismissing music as something that can never be mean of any account, we consider it under other aspects and with other standards, we may see that it is a power that has some of the properties of the arts which are called "artistic." Music is not just a means of expressing feelings; it is a medium through which we can express ideas and emotions, and it has the ability to create and maintain an atmosphere that can influence our thoughts and actions.

In short, music is a powerful tool that can be used to communicate ideas and emotions. As such, it is an essential part of any civilization, and it is through music that we can express our most profound thoughts and feelings.

However, music is not just a means of communication; it is also a means of expression. It is through music that we can express our deepest feelings and emotions, and it is through music that we can express our most profound ideas.

In conclusion, music is a powerful force that can be used to express ideas and emotions. It is through music that we can express our most profound thoughts and feelings, and it is through music that we can express our most profound ideas. Music is a powerful force that can be used to communicate and influence our thoughts and actions.
Literary Geography